

A quick look at the differences in average total bicycle trip duration and total bicycle trips taken for each day of the week over the 243 day-period of available data for the Citi Bike program. Interesting to note is that weekend days have an increased average duration of trips but decreased average number of trips. Perhaps weekend riders travel at a more leisurely pace or travel longer distances. Analysis of start and end station distance may provide further insight.